This Comprehensive Wildlife Conservation Strategy for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts is the natural outgrowth of the centuries of attention and care given to the state's biodiversity by innumerable organizations and individuals, including federal, state, and municipal governments, national, state, and local nonprofit conservation groups, land trusts, conservation commissions, scientists, amateur naturalists, and sportsmen. We thank them all for inspiring and contributing to this Strategy. Particular thanks to Karsten Hartel, who kindly granted permission to use information from his book, Inland Fishes of Massachusetts, to the staff of MassGIS, who contributed maps, and to the Massachusetts Audubon Society, for permission to quote from their catalogue of the changes in the Massachusetts landscape, Losing Ground: At What Cost?.
